Is It Time An Awakening?

Are you mad as hell yet? You should be! If not, maybe you don't know what is going on in America. Maybe you don't want to know. Honestly, who could blame you?

Whether you believe it or not, America is in a free fall. Our life, liberty, prosperity and security are hanging in the balance. Our freedoms are being eroded and we are already slaves to a system designed to keep us in full compliance.

We have the illusion of being free, but we far from it.

Very few countries are impressed by us anymore. Unless you're speaking with a real estate agent or a prostitute, chances are they're not going to be excited that you're American. It's not some badge of honor we get to parade around. We have become the bullies.

The quality of life for the average American is not that great and we don't see it getting better anytime soon.

So let's stop ignoring the Elephant in the room.

America is regulated, taxed, legislated, threatened, searched and worked to death. We are forced to hand over 30%, 40%, 50% of our labors to fund government. Does anyone know the real number we are taxed? In return, they start wars without our consent, they spy on us, strip search us at airports, stop our travels at checkpoints, fine us for breaking made up laws, torture prisoners, and conduct warrantless searches of its citizens. They bail out big banks and failed investment companies and flip the bill to the American tax payer. Did you get that part? The banks were the ones responsible for the 2008 financial crisis and they received all the bail out money, but American tax payers got the bill.

And here is the ultimate kicker... Americans are doing nothing to stand up to this. We accept everything that governments do without question. Sure, we may complain to one another, but ultimately we give in.

Why?

Why is it that America, once a country which possessed courage and conviction is sitting idly by and allowing itself to be taken to the slaughter without so much as a whimper?

The answer lies in the concept known as "Learned Helplessness" as discovered by Martin Seligman.

"Learned helplessness occurs when an animal is repeatedly subjected to an aversive stimulus that it cannot escape. Eventually, the animal will stop trying to avoid the stimulus and behave as if it is utterly helpless to change the situation. Even when opportunities to escape are presented, this learned helplessness will prevent any action."

Does that sound a bit familiar? Be honest. We've all had that feeling. America is helpless in changing our government's arrogant ways.

Today, we lay down in the face of the abject criminality of our government. We accept TSA searches, NSA spying, GMO's, chemtrails, warrantless searches, Universal Healthcare, taxes, the theft of our mortgages, the murder of dissidents, constant surveillance, unsafe medicines and foods, and the privatization of our most vital resources which are being priced out of our reach.

We have the ability to fight back. We have done it before (Revolutionary War, Civil War).

We are conditioned by an apathetic Congress that our opinion does not matter. The media tells us we are the mostly free nation on the earth. We honor our veterans and subsequently let the VA murder them. We are conditioned by these factors and the corporate controlled media that our actions make no difference.

We sit here today and accept everything our government does to us on behalf of their corporate controllers. The end result of our compliance.

That is the kind of insanity that is going on in "America" right now. Not sounding so great is it?

Wake up, it's not going to get better. The worse is yet to come and if history is on our side, you're about to see an epic collapse in America.

Just take a look at our current financial status. The gap between "wealthy America" and "poor America" is at the greatest it's ever been. The middle class is all but gone.

There is a prison guard named Delores Gilmore. She works really hard, but a lot of times she simply does not have enough money to pay all of her bills... sound familiar?

"The first of the month, I pay the rent," she said. "The next check, I pay my light bills. Sometimes I won't pay my rent and I pay the light bill from last month - if they have cut it off. Then I pay the rent at the end of the month."

Her life consists of going to work, taking care of her children, going to sleep, and then getting back up and repeating that same cycle once again... sounds familiar?

"I'm not fooling anybody." I don't have any friends. And that's sad. ... I go to work, come home, take them where they gotta go, if they gotta go somewhere, come back home, lie down, and go to work.

"That's what I do. All day, that's what I do."

Sadly, the truth is that most Americans can identify with what she is going through on a daily basis. In millions of families, both the husband and the wife work multiple jobs and it is still not enough.

How is your 401k doing since the financial crisis of 2008? Get all that money back you lost yet? The stock market is at record highs. The Dow is way above its post 2008 collapse. All the companies our government bailed out are giving their CEOs record bonuses. How are you doing? Why is your 401k still lagging behind?

You would have to have had your head buried in the sand to not see what is going on these days and we just brushed the surface of the issues that America faces.

It's time to wake up and understand that our society has been dumbed-down to the point where we now no longer look past the news of the day and ask the simple question, why? And when we do finally realize that life has changed in an adverse way, we then, and only then, want to know how such radical and adverse transformations can take place without us knowing. The honest truth is, we stopped paying attention to what is important a long time ago. Don't take it too personally, we all are being fooled.

Americans rank far down the educational ladder compared to other countries and many feel it is by design. The less educated we are, the greater the chance that we can be fooled and manipulated due to our lack of understanding when it comes to the inner workings of government and politics. Do you know how it all works? Have you seen the tax codes? Have you seen the health care bill? It's overwhelming and even Nancy Pelosi does not understand it.

America has been stolen from us, and most of you don't even know it.

Our own blind trust has stolen our ability to see beyond the television news, the Internet, and the incessant sound-bites from Capitol Hill. Our collective ignorance leads the way towards acceptance of corporate hegemony, naively believing that industry and retail have our best interests at heart. Like the movie Matrix, we live in a world that we think is real, yet the actual reality behind the scenes, behind the smiling TV anchors and the inundation of commercial enticements, is far more threatening than most seem to know.

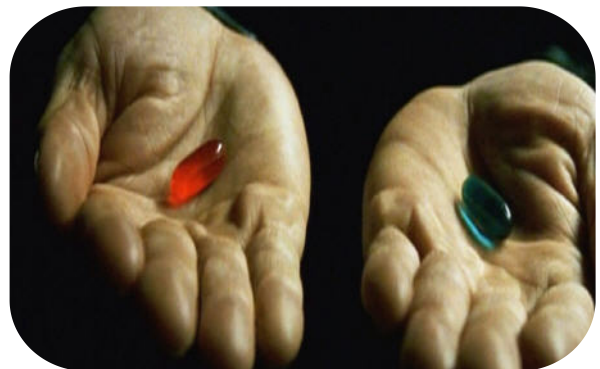

Some would wholeheartedly agree with this assessment, but sadly, a majority would openly scoff at the notion, basically in large part due to the blinders described above that have shackled their intellect and robbed their curiosity for the real truth. If you fit the latter group, perhaps a review of what Americans in general don't know would be enlightening to you.

This newsletter is about the truth. Nothing more. We are being deceived and your "learned helplessness" is stopping you from seeing the truth.

Unfortunately, our egos won't allow us to see the real truth. So you have to be awakened first.

So now you have a choice to make. And we will steal a line from the movie "Matrix" where Morpheus gave Neo an important decision to make? A decision that would forever change his life.

You can take the blue pill – the story ends, you can forget you even saw this newsletter and you wake up in your bed and believe whatever you want to believe. You take the red pill – you stay in Wonderland and we'll show you how deep the rabbit-hole goes.

Continue reading and continue to do your own due diligence. Educate yourself and discover who you really are and that these people running our lives are not our rulers, they are our servants.

This can truly be a defining moment in our history. Think of all the things we, as a nation, can accomplish with even just a little bit of knowledge.

The weight of our future, our children's future, our grandchildren's future, rests on the decision you and I make right now.

The American Dream or a Recurring Nightmare!

The American dream has been the hopes and aspirations of Americans for many generations. We strive for a better life through hard work and ambition. For most Americans, owning a home is the pinnacle of the American Dream. But as recent times have shown, this dream can be crushed in an instant. So what exactly is the American dream? How did we come to define it? And is it really dead?

In theory, the American Dream is this longstanding ideal that means opportunity, success, and the ability to “pick yourself up by your bootstraps” and work hard so you can be successful, buy your own home, send your kids to college, and yes... even get rich!

If we take a look back in time we can find that this “American Dream” idea was not so far-fetched. After World War Two, manufacturing jobs were abundant resulting in an entire industry of hard working blue collar workers that created a thriving middle class. In the 1950s and beyond, the notion of the American dream was at its peak. You had a family living with 2.5 kids, living in the suburbs with a picket fence, driving a nice car around the strip mall and encountering other stay at home moms. In those times the male was the sole breadwinner and the woman stayed at home to cook, clean and care for the children.

At the same time, home building skyrocketed. Vets returning from war faced a serious housing shortage.

Many young families had to bunk in with their parents. With the help of major government subsidies, along with new technology for mass-producing houses, housing developments rose at an accelerated rate in places like Long Island, and suburban L.A. and everywhere in between. These new developments and subsidies made home ownership possible, especially for vets who were just returning from the war. It was the American Dream coming true.

But of course not everyone was able to buy a home. Not everybody wanted this, and banks were very picky about who they gave mortgages to.

This unprecedented prosperity in the postwar era led many Americans to believe that each generation would have more than the last: a better home, a better car, better education, and more stuff. By 1960, roughly 60 percent of Americans owned homes, double the percentage in the 1930s. Unemployment was low and the economy was booming.

By the time the 1970s came around it all changed. The United States had spent a decade fighting a war in Vietnam while financing anti-poverty programs at home. The nation was deeply in debt. Then, in 1973, OPEC issued an oil embargo that shocked the nation's energy supply. Fuel prices skyrocketed. The U.S. Federal Reserve reacted to the country's economic woes with several bad monetary decisions.

The 70s became a period of deep and prolonged inflation. This Pleasantville scenario started to fall apart in a big way.

Fast forwarding to the 1990s, where massive deregulation of the financial sector paved the way for an economic collapse on a level not seen since the Great Depression. And after September 2011, domestic spending and the investment of institutions like education, was almost entirely abandoned, replaced by QE1 through infinity. We just printed cash to build up the military and amp up the national security state.

Millions of Americans were foreclosed upon. College students were plagued with debt. Seizures of third world markets continued. Once US-based jobs were exported to places like China and India.

But look, the notion of the idealized American dream we've all been taught, was never meant to be a dream for everyone. In fact this lifestyle could only be supported at the expense of the have-nots, within society. Guess what. People have finally started to wake up to the fact that the American dream is nothing more than a concept. In fact one could say the American Dream is dead. Kids today agree that it's simply unattainable.

America is struggling to find jobs, make ends meet and somehow pay their bills at a time when income inequality is at a record high. The gap between the richest 1 percent and the rest of America is the widest it's been since the Roaring '20s and late '40s.

The very wealthiest Americans earned more than 20 percent of the country's household income. The biggest share since 1928, the year right before the stock market crash. And the top 10 percent captured a record 48.2 percent of total earnings.

Where do you fit in on this scale? How about your children?

But since the last recession officially ended in June 2009, their words not mine, the top 1 percent have enjoyed the benefits of rising corporate profits and stock prices: 95 percent of the income gains reported since 2009 have gone to the top 1 percent. And guess who we bailed out during the 2008 recession? The stock market is at all-time highs right now. Did you benefit from any of this? If not you... who?

So knowing this, is it any wonder why parents believe their children will not grow up better off than them? Maybe it's time we start changing the way a dream lifestyle is even perceived because as long as we put corporate profits and money first before basic staples like healthcare, education and housing, the dream remains exactly that, a dream.

America is now a place where an uninsured citizen can go bankrupt just for getting sick. When it comes to housing, well, there are more than six times as many vacant homes in the US than there are homeless people. A quick drive through Anytown, USA and you will see block after block of abandoned building projects and empty retail properties. Yet, on the next block you will see brand new homes being built.

But instead of focusing on the people, our government gives more power and money to corporations who have successfully hijacked our America Dream. Did you forget who got all the bail outs?

But as long as our leaders doubled down on the concept of American exceptionalism to advance its agenda on the rest of the world in the name of humanitarianism, we remain blinded to the crisis unfolding on our own soil. Because we are busy preaching about why this country is the most exceptional in the world, it's easy to overlook its downward spiral.

The American Dream is dead. We have a wayward Government that takes every dollar they can from you. We have DEBT that could never be repaid. We have a monetary system (Federal Reserve) based on nothing. We have a banking system that creates money out of thin air.

The pessimism we now see everywhere, can be all be traced back to government. I place most of the blame on our Presidents and Congress. They're the ones who ended the American Dream.

I say "most of the blame" goes to Government. We need to accept some of the blame because all it took for this evil to triumph was that enough good Americans, like you and I, did nothing.

So for anyone of you still hanging on to that concept of the American Dream, remember the words of the great George Carlin who said...

"The reason they call it the American Dream is because you would have to be asleep to believe it."

Woe is Us, We're in A Lot of Trouble!

Woe is us if we continue to ignore the Elephant in the room.

So, America is on the brink of a collapse, what has that got to do with you— right? It's not your fault. And why is that 'Woe to us.' What did we do wrong?

The answer is simple. We all stood by and did nothing. We gave government the keys to our freedom and liberty in hopes they would take care of everything. Instead, they took over every aspect of our lives.

Ok, so how do we stop all this? How do we educate ourselves?

First, you have to understand that you and 350 million other Americans are being lied to and deceived right now. It happens every day and you miss it because you don't want to know the truth. And even if you knew the truth, you feel helpless to do anything about it or it's not affecting you... yet! You know something is not right, you can feel it.

The only truth most of us know is what we get over the tube through the news and on the information super highway called the Internet. Right now there is an entire generation that never knew anything that didn't come out of the television! And we are close to being able to say the same about the Internet.

"This television and the Internet is the gospel, the ultimate revelation. These information dispensers can make or break Presidents, Popes or Prime Ministers; the television and the Internet are the most awesome force in the whole world! Woe is us if it ever falls into the hands of the wrong people, and that's why 'Woe is us' when we rely on information coming from our televisions and off the Internet. Because a select few of the largest companies in the world controls the most awesome propaganda force in the whole world: who knows what crap will be peddled for 'truth' though these venues? Can you tell the truth from the lie?

"So you listen! Listen real close: television and Internet is not the truth- it's an amusement park. It's a circus, a carnival a traveling troupe of acrobats, story tellers, dancers, singers, side-show freaks, lion-tamers, football players and reality shows. They're in the boredom killing business!

"So if you want the truth go to God, go to your guru's- go to yourselves-because that's the only place you're going to find any real truth! Because man – you know you're never going to get any truth from government. They'll tell you anything you want to hear. They'll lie like hell: They'll tell you that Kojack always gets the killer and that nobody ever gets cancer at Archie Bunker's house. And no matter how much trouble the hero is in don't worry just look at your watch at the end of the hour he's going to win they'll give you any shit you want to hear! They look you in the face and tell the American people they found weapons of mass destruction in Iraq, then later tell you they had bad intel. They will tell you the economy is just fine when in fact nothing has changed, it's gotten a lot worse.

They deal in Illusions, none of it is true! But you people sit there day after day and night after night; all ages, colors, creeds: It's all we know! You're beginning to believe the illusions they are spinning here! You're beginning to think that the tube and the Internet is reality- and that your own lives are unreal! You DO whatever the tube tells you, you dress like the tube, you eat like the tube, you raise your children like the tube, you even think like the tube!

"This is mass madness you maniacs! In God's name you people are the real thing-TV and Internet are the illusion!

It's time for us to stop being naïve and start educating ourselves. America's Great Awakening can only show you the truth. You have to see it for yourself.

Silver -vs- Money – Money Secrets

Eighty years ago $100 purchased 400 ounces of silver while today that $100 purchases about 5 ounces.

Someday soon $100 will purchase only one ounce of silver. Depending on how rapidly the money supply is increased and how quickly confidence in paper money evaporates we may see the day when it takes ten, or more, $100 bills to purchase a single ounce of silver.

Hyperinflation has happened in many countries in the past 100 years. In fact, ALL FIAT CURRENCY has a 100% failure rate. There is no reason to think it won't happen to America. If hyperinflation occurs, your silver and gold will be worth much more in nominal dollars and will, to some extent, protect your purchasing power.

Prepare by purchasing physical silver and gold and storing it outside the banking system.

Let's take a look back in time to:

1932: Silver was selling for about $0.25 per ounce (average annual price). Our $100 bill would buy about 400 ounces.

1962: Silver was selling for about $1.20 per ounce. Our $100 bill would buy about 83 ounces.

1982: Silver was selling at about $10.60 per ounce. Our $100 bill would buy about 9 ounces. (Early in 1980 silver spiked to about $50 per ounce for a day or so and then crashed.)

2014: Silver prices have been volatile. Our $100 bill will buy perhaps 5 ounces of silver.

Over the course of the last 100 years, during which we have been blessed with the Federal Reserve and massive government spending, our $100 bill no longer buys 400 ounces of real physical silver; now it will purchase only about 5 ounces.

Depending on how rapidly the money supply is increased and how quickly confidence in paper money evaporates we may see the day when it takes ten, or more, $100 bills to purchase a single ounce of silver.

Your true wealth is your time and freedom. Money is just a tool for trading your time. It's a container to store your economic energy until you're ready to deploy it.

But the whole world has been turned away from real money and has been fooled into using currency, a deceitful impostor that is silently stealing your two most valuable assets - your time and your freedom.

The currency in your pocket is a medium of exchange. It's a unit of account because it has got numbers on it. It's somewhat durable. It's portable. It's divisible in that you can make change and it's fungible. A dollar in my pocket buys the same amount as a dollar in your pocket.

But because governments can print more and more and more of it, and dilute the currency supply, it's continually transferring wealth out of your pocket, out of your bank account to the government and to the banking system.

The reason that gold and silver are the optimum form of money is because of their properties. It's an easy medium of exchange because gold and silver store a large amount of value in a very small area. It's a unit of account. Pure gold has the same value all over the planet. So an ounce of gold buys the same amount in Egypt as it would in China or in the United States.

It's durable. The same gold that Egyptians were using in trade 5000 years ago is still here with us today. It does not corrode. It's divisible. You can make change with it. It's very portable. Sure, you could use something like oil as money. It's just that you can't carry around a barrel of oil on your back.

Is there an example throughout history of a fiat currency, a piece of paper that's un-backed by anything, surviving? No, not one! Here's why. Addison Wiggin cataloged all of the fiat currencies throughout history and what happened to each of them.

Addison dutifully went to work. Within a short period of time, he had gone through the alphabet. All the fiat currencies that started with the letter A were done. They all went to zero.

He was halfway through the letter B and all the fiat currencies that started with the letter B and there were 600 of them. Just the first letter and a half of the alphabet and every single one of them went to zero. Every one! Six hundred fiat currencies that started with the letter A and half of the ones that started with the letter B are 600 of these things. Not one ever came close.

You think this one, the United States dollar is going to be the first one after all that? I don't think so. No currency, fiat currency has ever survived. None!

If you learn what is going on and how the financial world works, you can put yourself on the correct side of this wealth transfer. Winston Churchill once said that... "the further you look into the past, the further that you can see into the future." You need to gaze into the future and see this crisis coming, the greatest crisis in the history of mankind, and make it a great opportunity for yourself.

If you look at what's really going on, it's a con game. So there's confidence. Well, the Federal Reserve is very forthright about what they're doing if you read their web sites. They will tell you it's a confidence game. They tell you that there's no intrinsic value in their money. They will tell you that they print it backed by absolutely nothing.

They actually display all these facts. But if you tell somebody in the public that this stuff is created out of thin air, there's no backing, whatsoever, it's absolutely worthless, it's about as valuable as Monopoly money, they will look at you like you're nuts.
